Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders

Tenure-Track Faculty Positions (Open Rank)

The Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders at Temple University seeks applicants for 9-month tenure track faculty positions at the rank of assistant, associate or full professor. The Department is looking for talented and energetic faculty members with expertise in the areas of phonological development/disorders, child language development/disorders, literacy and/or bilingualism, although strong candidates with expertise in other areas will be considered. Successful applicants will join the Department’s strong research tradition in speech/language development and disorders in children from diverse cultural, linguistic, and economic backgrounds.

A Ph.D. in Communication Sciences and Disorders or related field is required. Successful applicants must have the ability to develop a nationally recognized research program and secure external funding or have an established research program with a history of external funding. Applicants must demonstrate an ability to develop interdisciplinary collaborations and a dedication to teaching and mentorship of students. CCC-SLP is preferred, but not mandatory.

Temple University, a Carnegie Research University (high research activity), is a comprehensive public university located in Philadelphia, PA. The campus is racially and ethnically diverse, with more than 39,000 students. The Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders is ranked 29th in the nation by US News and enjoys an interdisciplinary faculty representing speech-language pathology, cognitive neuroscience, linguistics, psychology and audiology. In addition, the Department has strong ties to many departments in the University, including Education, Psychology, Educational Psychology, Public Health, Neurology, Radiology, Rehabilitation Sciences (Occupational Therapy and Therapeutic Recreation), and Physical Therapy. The Department offers B.A., M.A., and Ph.D. degrees in Communication Sciences and Disorders.

Please send a letter of interest, a statement of teaching and research, curriculum vitae, sample publications, and a list of three references to chpsw-search@temple.edu.

Review of applications will begin immediately and will continue until the position is filled.

Temple University is an equal opportunity/affirmative action institution. People of color, women, veterans, and persons with disabilities are encouraged to apply.