FACULTY POSITION (NON-TENURE TRACK): COMMUNICATION SCIENCES AND DISORDERS

This is an exciting time for the Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders and the College of Public Health at Temple University. We are experiencing unprecedented growth in enrollment, graduate programs and research. Over the next four years, the College will expand its footprint with a new building and add 50 faculty members across the 9 public health and health-related professions departments. In 2014, Dean Laura A. Siminoff, an eminent public health researcher, joined the College and under her leadership, CPH is engaging in a realignment of interdisciplinary research and academic programming within Public Health.

We are seeking an innovative and experienced non-tenure track faculty member at the rank of instructor or assistant professor. This appointment is for one academic year (August 17, 2015 to June 30, 2016) with likelihood for renewal. Responsibilities include teaching courses in communication sciences and disorders and supervising students in the Temple University Speech-Language-Hearing Center and at satellite sites and serving as a liaison to students in external practa. Opportunities for additional teaching may be available during the summer sessions.

The successful applicant will have teaching expertise in one or more of the following areas: introduction to communication sciences and disorders, child language development and/or disorders, clinical management/methods, or research methods. These applicants will also have clinical expertise in one or more of the following areas: phonological disorders, child language disorders, fluency disorders, adult language disorders, or augmentative and alternative communication.

Requirements: Master’s or doctoral degree in Communication Sciences and Disorders. Prior university teaching and supervisory experience is preferred. The position also requires a Certificate of Clinical Competence and eligibility for a PA license in Speech-Language Pathology.

Temple University is an urban, research-intensive university located in Philadelphia. Temple is the 6th-largest provider of professional education in the country and includes Schools of Law, Medicine, Pharmacy, Podiatry, and Dentistry in addition to research centers including the NCI-designated Fox Chase Cancer Center. The College of Public Health enrolls 4,600 students across our departments with a faculty of 155. We have 15 faculty in the Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders. There are over 360 students in our undergraduate and graduate programs. Our master’s program is fully accredited by the Council on Academic Accreditation of the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association and is approved by the Pennsylvania Department of Education.

Temple’s Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders is ranked #29 in the country by US News and World Report, and well known for its work in adult language disorders, bilingualism, child language, fluency and voice.

To apply, please send a letter of interest and resume with names of 3 references by email to Caitlin Ozga (Caitlin.ozga@temple.edu), fax (215) 204-5954, or surface mail to: Search Committee, Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders, Temple University, 1701 N. 13th Street, 110 Weiss Hall (265-62), Philadelphia, PA 19122.

Review of applications begins April 13, 2015.

Temple University is an equal opportunity, equal access, affirmative action employer committed to achieving a diverse community.